It's the end of the line for 'Chinatown' bus routes

Numerous bus lines in Philadelphia and NYC shut down ◐ Companies cited for numerous violations ◐ Unaware travelers left stranded Thursday

RIKARD LARMA/METRO

▶ A would-be rider was stranded Thursday.

▶ This bus, seen in 2007, was among many that departed from Chinatown.

Twenty-six bus carriers, including 10 in Philadelphia, were shut down by federal safety officials Thursday for numerous violations following a yearlong investigation.

Apex Bus Inc. and I-95 Coach Inc., both based in New York, operated 16 carriers, and New Century Travel Inc., based in Philadelphia, ran 10 lines. The companies were popular for their inexpensive trips to and from each city's Chinatown, transporting more than 1,800 passengers a day between Boston and Florida. Officials called the action the largest single crackdown in the history of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration, part of the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Each of the companies were cited for employing drivers who worked excessive hours and did not have valid commercial driver's licenses, as well as using vehicles that had not been regularly inspected and repaired.

"If you put passengers' safety at risk, we will shut you down."
RAY LAHOOD,
U.S. TRANSPORTATION SECRETARY

The investigation began following a series of deadly bus crashes along Interstate 95 last spring, including one on the New Jersey Turnpike that killed a 21-year-old Royersford man and the driver.

With the imminent hazard orders, the companies may have a hard time getting back on the road. A new FMCSA rule published in April aims to prohibit the owners from "reincarnating" through affiliate companies.

Some riders, unaware of the shutdown, showed up Thursday outside New Century's Chinatown location where an orange notice was posted on the door.

Azarya Tafesse, a Bryn Athyn College student, said he usually rides the bus back and forth to Washington, D.C. — which costs $15 each way. "Sometimes the bus drives a little fast, but other than that I thought it was fine."

Hack rides take over?

PHILADELPHIA. Philadelphia police and federal safety officials were stationed outside New Century's Chinatown location Thursday. That didn't stop one man from offering to take stranded passengers to New York City.

When a Metro reporter asked if he was giving rides, he said, "I don't know." He denied being affiliated with New Travel.

Transporting travelers across state lines for money without authority from FMCSA violates federal regulations, according to Pennsylvania Division Administrator Timothy Cotter.

"We're making sure companies who pick up are legit operations," Cotter said.

Cheap rides

Fatal crashes surged last year as intercity bus travel became the fastest-growing U.S. mode of commercial transportation.

▶ In 2011, at least 28 people died in eight crashes, including three in 11 weeks involving carriers operating out of, or carrying passengers between, Chinatown neighborhoods in East Coast cities.

▶ If New Century gets back in business, Oliver Oree said he wouldn't hesitate to use the line again. The 56-year-old retired plumber bought tickets twice a month for trips from Washington to New York, preferring the $20 one-way fare to $70 on Greyhound.

▶ "I don't know what their problem is with safety," Oree said. "I take my grandkids on it all the time. I've never had any difficulties."

Nutter gains AVI supporter

State Sen. Anthony Williams joined Mayor Michael Nutter to demand state officials support pending legislation necessary for the city to enact Nutter's proposed Actual Value Initiative of property tax assessments. Williams said the bills were sailing along in Harrisburg until divisions among city legislators caused some in Philadelphia's state delegation to second guess the plan. METRO

Former Philadelphia Eagle Raheem Brock, currently unemployed by the NFL, appeared in City Council Thursday to accept a resolution in his honor. The event runs through Sunday at the Pennsylvania Convention Center. METRO

SRC approves controversial '12-'13 budget

PHILADELPHIA. Amid chants of "no confidence" from an angry audience, the School Reform Commission unanimously approved a $2.5 billion budget Thursday for city schools.

It relies on a "vital" $94 million from a proposed property-tax assessment being debated in City Council. The budget also calls for massive layoffs and more borrowing just to maintain depleted levels of service. METRO/SDL

Fire union, City Hall in war of words

Officials at firefighters union Local 22 said Thursday that representatives from Mayor Michael Nutter's administration and Fire Commissioner Lloyd Ayers' office were lying when they gave statements to the media last week about the Kensington warehouse blaze that killed firefighters Lt. Daniel Sweeney and Capt. Robert Neary in April.

Specifically, the union took issue with the administration's claim that there was a collapse zone established around the perimeter of the fire.

Nutter's communications director Mark McDonald responded with a statement accusing Local 22 of using the incident as a "pathetic" political ploy. "The leaders of Local 22 have once again dishonored two fallen heroes, their families and all rank and file firefighters with a pathetic display of falsehoods," he said. "Their real issue is anger over not having a contract."

"Their real issue is anger over not having a contract."
MARK MCDONALD, MAYOR MICHAEL NUTTER'S COMMUNICATIONS DIRECTOR

A Philadelphia Fire Department training manual released by the union Thursday reads, "During an exterior fire attack, three zones should be established. These zones will provide the incident commander an adequate level of safety and accountability, for all participants at the incident. Zone 1 is the immediate collapse zone indicated with banner tape and/or rope. Once this zone is established, everyone should remain outside of this area."

The union released a previously unseen photo showing Deputy Commissioner John Devlin at the fire scene while a second firefighter stood on the building's roof. "In multiple photos we've now displayed to both the public and to the press, there is not one shred of evidence that safety tape existed on that ground," union spokesman Frank Keel said.

ALEX WIGGLESWORTH
awigglesworth@metro.us

Pending litigation

Keel said that pending litigation is factoring into the city's "cowardly" denial that there were tactical errors made in fire department leadership.

"Their insistence there was a collapse zone despite everything to the contrary can only lead to one conclusion, and that conclusion is that Rob Neary and Dan Sweeney disobeyed direct orders, acted as cowboys and were responsible for their own deaths."

Priest abuse trial now heading to jury's hands

Closing arguments were held Thursday in the closely watched child sex abuse case against a Roman Catholic priest and a church monsignor who is the highest-ranking U.S. church official to stand trial in a pedophilia scandal.

The jury has heard 10 weeks of testimony in the trial of Monsignor William Lynn, the former secretary of the clergy in the Philadelphia Archdiocese.

Lynn, 61, is accused of conspiracy and child endangerment and could face as much as 28 years in prison if convicted. Lynn is the highest-ranking U.S. clergyman to go to trial in the Roman Catholic church's pedophilia scandal. His job was to supervise 800 Philadelphia priests, including investigating sex abuse claims against them, from 1992 to 2004.

Prosecutors say he covered up child sex abuse allegations, often by transferring priests to unsuspecting parishes.

▶ Lynn

"I did much more than had been done before I got there."

MSGR. WILLIAM LYNN

During the trial in Common Pleas Court, Lynn maintained he was powerless to remove pedophile priests and that his efforts to do so were often overruled by his boss, Cardinal Anthony Bevilacqua, who died in January at age 88.

But prosecutors say Lynn opted to put the protection of the church above the protection of children who were being molested.

Attorneys and Common Pleas Court Judge M. Teresa Sarmina met on Wednesday to decide on the wording of her instructions to the jury ahead of deliberations. Nationwide, more than 10,000 allegations of child sex abuse were brought against priests between 1950 and 2002, according to a report commissioned by the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. REUTERS

Appeals court strikes down discriminating marriage law

A federal appeals court on Thursday found a law that denies federal benefits to married same-sex couples unconstitutional, in a case with implications for gay marriages across the United States.

The Boston-based Court of Appeals for the 1st Circuit concluded that the Defense of Marriage Act, which defines marriage as between a man and a woman, discriminates against gay couples.

"Under current Supreme Court authority, Congress' denial of federal benefits to same-sex couples lawfully married in Massachusetts has not been adequately supported by any permissible federal interest," Judge Michael Boudin wrote for the three-judge panel.

Plaintiffs, including seven married same-sex couples and three widowers, said the law, which prevents them from filing joint federal tax returns or collecting survivor benefits from the Social Security retirement program, denied them equal protections guaranteed under the Constitution.

In a companion case also on appeal, Massachusetts Attorney General Martha Coakley argued that Congress overstepped its authority and violated the Tenth Amendment of the Constitution in passing DOMA, because the law undermined states' abilities to recognize marriage equality.

Lawyers for the Bipartisan Legal Advisory Group of the House of Representatives had defended the 1996 law, which the Obama administration essentially abandoned in 2011.

A federal judge in Massachusetts declared a key section of DOMA unconstitutional in 2010, and the appeals court agreed. Massachusetts legalized same-sex marriage in 2004, the first state to do so. REUTERS

▶ Activists march in protest last month of the recently passed Constitutional Amendment One in North Carolina, which defines marriage solely as a union between a man and a woman.

Dissenting opinion

The appeals court recognized that many Americans believe marriage to be a union between a man and a woman. But the panel concluded that federalism permits diversity of governance, applying to states' decisions to legalize same-sex marriage.

- Kris Mineau, president of the Massachusetts Family Institute, criticized the ruling.
- "For a Massachusetts-based court to just audaciously proclaim that the federal government is wrong and has to recognize a unique social experiment ... is bizarre and a violation of the principles of our federalist system," he said.

Facebook drops to $27

Shares in Facebook Inc. kept up their downward march on Thursday, cracking under $27 to set a record low and shedding almost $30 billion in market value since a botched May 18 initial public offering.

Facebook, the No. 1 Internet social network and the first U.S. company to debut with a market capitalization of more than $100 billion, slid 3.1 percent to $27.32 at midday after dipping to a low of $26.83.

S&P Capital IQ cut its target on the stock to $27 from $30. The company debuted at $38, which many analysts now deem overpriced. REUTERS

Wal-Mart drops out of conservative group

Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the world's No. 1 retailer and the biggest seller of firearms in the United States, is dropping out of a U.S. conservative advocacy group that has been a lightning rod over voting and gun laws.

Wal-Mart said late Wednesday it is suspending membership in the American Legislative Council, which the retailer joined in 1993.

ALEC sparked controversy recently because of its involvement in voting laws and in "stand your ground" gun laws, including the one under scrutiny in the Florida killing of unarmed 17-year-old Trayvon Martin.

A coalition of liberal advocates targeted the group for its support of the self-defense laws. REUTERS

Residential segregation still a problem, study says

Multiethnic neighborhoods have increased in the United States in recent decades — but not many white and black families are moving into them, according to new study published on Thursday.

Researchers who analyzed the mobility trends of more than 100,000 families in metropolitan areas over nearly three decades found that the majority of blacks and whites continue to live in neighborhoods with high concentrations of residents of their own race.

"The truth is, when it comes to eliminating residential segregation, we still have a long way to go," said Kyle Crowder, a professor of sociology at the University of Washington in Seattle.

"We have more neighborhoods that are potential destinations for white and black movers, and certainly more are moving to these places than used to, but still the model category is movement between these predominately white and black neighborhoods."

Crowder, who reported the findings in the American Sociological Review journal, said most multiethnic neighborhoods are populated mainly by Latino and Asian families.

RICH H LEDG

▶ The study also shows that only about 19 percent of blacks and 2.4 percent of whites moved to a multiethnic neighborhood.

Nearly 44 percent of black families tracked in the study moved to a predominately black area, 5 percent relocated to a mostly white community and 17.7 selected a multiethnic neighborhood, which was at least 10 percent black, 10 percent Hispanic or Asian and at least 40 percent white. REUTERS

WEEKEND

SNOW WHITE WITH BITE

How empowered can a 200-year-old female icon be? Despite Hollywood's efforts to modernize ancient fairy-tale heroines like Snow White, anti-feminism is at the core of the story

Decoded

The lessons behind your favorite fairy tales

Professor Zipes explains which issues each of these traditional tales is meant to discuss

"Little Red Riding Hood"
"This story raises the issue of rape and violation of a young woman. It raises the question: 'Who is responsible for the rape when it happens and how can women protect themselves, or do they really want to be raped?'"

"Cinderella"
"How do parents treat nonbiological children? That question of course is still with us today. Who has a right to the property after the mother or father has died?"

"Hansel and Gretel"
"Here we have the issue of child abuse and child abandonment."

"Beauty and the Beast"
"[This is about] forcing a young woman, sort of guilt-tripping the young daughter, into marrying the man who is 30 or 40 years older."

Snow White is Hollywood's current favorite candidate for a makeover. This weekend's release of "Snow White and the Huntsman" casts quite a different light on that fair princess most of us came to know in the animated Disney film. Struggling against the terrifying Queen Ravenna, the modern Snow White portrayed by Kristen Stewart is an empowered warrior. In the ABC show "Once Upon a Time" and in Tarsem Singh's rendition "Mirror, Mirror," too, Ms. White is again no damsel in distress. But as much as these works have attempted to make the character of Snow White more closely resemble the modern, independent female, there remains an anti-feminist message at the story's core.

The Snow White story has always been about the rivalry between stepmother and daughter — which pits an older woman against a younger woman, with men almost entirely absent from the conflict.

Professor Jack Zipes, author of several books on the topic of fairy tales, including this year's "The Irresistible Fairy Tale," says that making a woman an exceptionally evil villain is an anti-feminist statement of its own.

Quoted

"Since the beginning of time, it's been man's natural instinct to value youth and beauty over age and experience."
GRAE DRAKE

"If we look at the world, [it] is really in the control of men — and they're pretty g—d— evil. But in these films, the dominant force is an evil queen, who is vicious and nasty and contemptible. To my mind, it's part of what I call the backlash against feminism," he explains. "Whether it's done consciously or not, if you look at these films, they really say something pretty terrible about women. These films are so reactionary. They react to the fact that women have asserted themselves for more equal rights and great progress has been made."

We may think we admire a woman's smarts and bravery above all in these adaptations, but that doesn't change the fact that it's Snow White's beauty that makes her special in the first place. And that valuation is perfectly in line with our natural instincts.

UNIVERSAL STUDIOS

▶ Charlize Theron stars as Queen Ravenna in "Snow White and the Huntsman."

"Since the beginning of time, it's been man's natural instinct to value youth and beauty over age and experience," says Grae Drake, movie critic for Fandango.com.

"We live in a world that is constantly selling youth, and so seeing it in the movie completely makes sense," she says. "We're trying so hard to value these higher ideas about all of the wonderful things that age brings you — knowledge, experience, serenity. Our animal instinct is still really going strong in the background, at the same time thinking, 'Yeah, that's a bunch of bologna.'"

Yes, the Snow White story inherently values and celebrates beauty, but that may be more of a reflection of how we live than an endorsement of how we should want to be.

"Fairy tales weren't really made to talk about the most beautiful side of humanity," Drake says. "It's often very ugly."

Let's talk about sex with Maggie Gyllenhaal

"I've made lots of movies about sex," Maggie Gyllenhaal says soberly. "I feel pretty open and curious and interested. I was surprised to feel as much as I did."

Gyllenhaal is remarking on what happened when she watched her new film along with the crowds at the Toronto Film Festival last year. "I felt like … people [in the audience] were a little hysterical, flushed. I felt that a little bit, too. I was just surprised that we all as a culture are so unused to seeing or talking about women having orgasms. I didn't expect to feel that way."

Inspired by historical fact, "Hysteria," set in Victorian London, focuses on two doctors who specialize in the treatment of an amorphous female condition called the catch-all term that also serves as the movie's title. Dr. Mortimer Granville (Hugh Dancy) and Dr. Robert Dalrymple (Jonathan Pryce) find that stimulating a "paroxysm" in the female can relieve them of their nervousness, depression or other such feelings of malaise. But the intensity of the work (there are many shots of poor Dr. Granville soaking his hands in ice water) leads the younger doctor to stumble on the invention for the first "personal massager," i.e., vibrator.

"I was just surprised that we all, as a culture, are so unused to seeing or talking about women having orgasms." GYLLENHAAL

Having starred in many a steamy scene, including those of the quirky S&M drama "Secretary," Gyllenhaal has no problem with a candid discussion on sexual politics.

Given that "Hysteria" is released only a few years after Sarah Ruhl's Tony-nominated play "In the Next Room (or The Vibrator Play)" which also covers the topic of Victorian vibrators, she's happy to speculate as to why we're seeing such an interest in that era of sexual repression and awakening.

"Maybe we're just ready to start thinking about women's sexuality and pleasure in a way that we hadn't been before," she offers. "What I keep thinking is interesting is that [these Victorian doctors] in the movie have this really difficult job of walking this line between believing that they are performing a medical procedure that has nothing to do with sexuality. At the same time, people have been having sex since there have been people. Orgasms are associated with sexual pleasure. Like, how dissociative do you have to be to think that this has nothing to do with sex?"

UNIVERSAL STUDIOS

▶ "Is that a wrinkle?!"

The fairest remake of them all

'Snow White and the Huntsman'
Director: Rupert Sanders
Cast: Charlize Theron, Kristen Stewart, Chris Hemsworth
Rating: PG-13
Grade: ❶❶❶❶◐

If any film is going to make a case for rehashing a well-worn story, it's this one. Rupert Sanders' vividly told rendition of the "Snow White" fairy tale not only brings something modern to the table (reimagining Snow White as a warrior princess) but also provides rich layers of characterization to the bad guy, which is something most evil witches and queens don't get to enjoy.

As Queen Ravenna, whose powers come only from her beauty (and the beauty of young girls she extracts it from), Charlize Theron is enjoyably wicked. Only occasionally does her deathly howl veer over to campy overacting. Can we forgive the woman? She won an Oscar. And Kristen Stewart? We thought it was suspect that she wasn't shown speaking in a single trailer for the film — maybe they were trying to hide her poor performance — but Stewart managed to abandon her normal squirmy lip-biting self in order to pull off British accent lite and show some measure of poise.

The loving attention to detail is obvious in the art direction, which is really what elevates this film above the usual hack job blockbusters we see this time of year. Everything, from Queen Ravenna's beetle dress to the spooky creatures of the Dark Forest, is so gorgeously intricate that you can't help but be in awe. Not since "The Lord of the Rings" trilogy have we seen a fantasy world so beautifully complete.

Immigrant experiences, then and now

The 'Kensington Riots Project' connects the struggles of 19th-century Irish Philadelphians to young Arab-American artists

MARIA MOLLER

▶ The artists have created street art during the past year. This weekend, a gallery show will feature highlights.

When Maria Moller attended "Yard Songs" more than two years ago, she was confronted with an unsavory era in Philadelphia history. The multimedia installation was artist Jebney Lewis' elegy to the trainage of Kensington, but the piece also touched on the oft-forgotten Kensington Riots of 1844, when Protestant groups clashed with Irish immigrants, resulting in at least 20 deaths. The event led to, among other things, the formation of Philadelphia's fire department and Catholic schools.

Inspired, she contacted Lewis with a new idea: "The Kensington Riots Project." The piece would be created with neighborhood kids, connecting their immigrant experiences to the struggles of the Irish over 170 years ago.

After a year and a half of development, workshops and street art, KRP is launching a gallery opening this weekend, featuring highlights of the process and celebrating seven of the most committed high school participants.

The young artists were all originally selected through the Philly-based Arab-American Community Development Corporation.

"It was always important to me to involve people from the neighborhood — people that had a more visceral connection to some of the issues this raises," says Moller, an actress, writer and co-founder of Shakespeare in Clark Park. "It's been an educational project, but we've been approaching it more as a collaborative art project."

Funded by PEW Charitable Trusts, during the past year students have been researching the riots and creating street art at the sites of some the most brutal clashes. In one piece — created with the help of local poet Frank Sherlock — they created faux-historical placards commemorating victims. "It was really amazing that they were so open to creating stuff," says Moller. "I think it was kind of bizarre of me to be like, 'Hi kids, I'm going to introduce you to conceptual art. I hope you're along for the ride!'"

Curtis Stone dishes on '80 Plates'

On "Around the World in 80 Plates," Bravo's cross between "The Amazing Race" and "Top Chef," cheftestants travel the world and complete culinary challenges based on the culture of the city they're in. Though the series is sending its competitors everywhere from England to Morocco, you don't have to leave your kitchen to add some of the global flair host Curtis Stone says you can bring to any dish. "That's the great thing about a show like this — there's all sorts of inspiration to be taken from so many different sorts of people. The home cook will learn a lot by watching this."

Here, he breaks down some lessons learned from his time abroad.

Italy: Customs are important

"The culture in Tuscany was just so steeped in tradition, and some of our contestants tried to do stuff that was a little out there — they were just like, 'That's not in season right now!' 'Basil in a ribollita? Why?'"

France: Explore your food

"[In our episode in France] they do a tasting of different cheeses and have to identify which ones are made with sheep's milk. I think that opens your eyes to be like, 'Oh, sheep's milk, cow's milk, goat's milk — what's the difference?'"

Thailand: One base, many dishes

"In Chiang Mai, Thai food really comes alive, and they do so much in a mortar and pestle. They use things like galangal, which is very similar to ginger, and they also use ginger, lemongrass, lime leaves, palm sugar, lime rinds themselves, garlic, cilantro — of course lots of fresh chilies — and all that's pounded together to create this delicious paste. It's so adaptable. That's how the Thais cook, which is really inspirational."

▶ "Around the World in 80 Plates," hosted by Curtis Stone and Cat Cora, airs Wednesdays at 10 p.m. on Bravo.

Get involved in the show

▶ Gilt Taste, Gilt Groupe's online food market, has also partnered with the show: Each week, you can visit its "Around the World in 80 Plates Marketplace" to purchase exotic ingredients like chorizo and green curry. You can also check out recipes tied to each episode.

Spice it up

Spices add exotic finesse to any meal. "If you're talking about a burger, you can do Thai burgers, Moroccan burgers — you can do all these different things," Stone says. His top spices for rich flavors:

- Paprika
- Cumin
- Cayenne
- Fennel seeds and fennel a la grecque
- Fresh herbs (not dried)

Jon Snow matures in the land of ice

The 'Game of Thrones' character grows as a guard of the North Actor Kit Harington believes in the cause

While the land of Westeros is thrown into a war for the crown, one of the most popular characters on "Game of Thrones," Jon Snow, is half a world away simply fighting for his life. The bastard son of Season 1's deceased hero Ned Stark, Jon, played by 25-year-old British actor Kit Harington, is now a member of the Night's Watch. His order is sworn to protect Westeros from threats "beyond the Wall," the immense structure that marks the Seven Kingdoms' northernmost border. As Jon and his Night's Watch brothers advance on those frigid regions to wage their own battle against supernatural terrors, Jon finds himself a prisoner. But there's a true ranger growing into the black furs and leather of the Night's Watch uniform, Harington says.

'I am Jon Snow'

You seem to have a real fondness for the character. What does Jon Snow mean to you?

It meant a huge amount when I got the part because I was just excited to be on an HBO show. Now it's turned into something else, in that I realize I could be living with this character for five or six years. That really has significance because you realize, "I actually am Jon Snow." You have to love it. And fortunately, I really love the guy. I couldn't be in a happier place.

To capture the harshness of the North, the Night's Watch scenes were filmed in Iceland. Were the temperatures the most difficult thing to contend with?
It was, yeah. A lot of the time we were in sub-zero temperatures. But it's great from an acting point of view — we were supposed to be in a very harsh climate, and we were. By the end of filming, we were all very physically worn out and quite emotionally worn out as well. It drains you in a lot of ways, but it's a stunning country. I think the Icelandic tourism board likes "Game of Thrones" right now. I hope so, anyway.

Speaking of emotionally taxing, what is Jon's headspace now? Obviously the big event to him was his father dying. In Season 2, he witnesses things and experiences things that are pushing him past that. He soon moves into a very different headspace as far as what he has to do and what his mission is. He does, in a very true way, leave the South behind. He's in a very different world; it's so far beyond the rest of the story that he's not connected to it.

What have his experiences — including fighting supernatural beings and witnessing the cruel lifestyle of the Wildlings — taught Jon?
What he's signed up for, the Night's Watch, that was always sort of a plaything for him, all kind of glorious. He was going to prove to everyone that he was a legendary Night's Watch ranger, and now he realizes it's not just something to show people — it's a way of life. He starts believing in the cause.

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

Barrymore ready for her big day

Drew Barrymore is all set to walk down the aisle with fiance Will Kopelman Saturday. On Wednesday, the actress was spotted at the Chanel store in Beverly Hills for her final wedding dress fitting.

Along for support was "Charlie's Angels" co-star Cameron Diaz who — in addition to being the kind of girl we imagine has an emergency mini bar in her purse — is a close friend of the couple, and was even clued in before the proposal.

"I knew Drew was getting married before she did!" she tells InStyle UK.

As for Drew, she's apparently overlooked the fact that Cameron is all glowing blonde legs and has given her a front-row seat Saturday. "Drew has been leaning on Cameron a lot," a friend tells Us Weekly. "Cameron has been very involved."

Is it just us, or have we seen this movie before? Cameron's going to be late and put her shoes on as she runs down the aisle. Drew will wear flowers in her hair and charmingly stumble through her vows while biting her lip. Someone's saucy great aunt should probably feel up a groomsman played by Andy Samberg.

We'll check back in on Monday, Drew — with the big box of Sno Caps.

▶ She may have small hands, but more likely, that's a giant rock.

▶ We'd miss these two, but there's always Lindsay.

Kardashian and West moving in?

Kim Kardashian and Kanye West have both put their L.A. homes on the market, according to TMZ. The details aren't available to those of us who can't afford to even drive by, but Kim is rumored to be asking around $5 million.

Sources tell the site that the couple is looking to move in together somewhere where they can have a little privacy. They're reportedly thinking gated community, but let's dream big and go with desert island — it's the weekend, after all.

Harris and Hefner back on

Crystal Harris infamously dumped Hugh Hefner a week before their wedding and proceeded to take every outlet and their intern up on interviews, but the former Playmate is back in the Playboy Mansion, and it looks like the happy couple is back together. "Crystal begged Hef to let her come back," a source tells RadarOnline. "He surprisingly doesn't have any hard feelings, so he let her move back into the mansion."

Harris

And here we assumed that the 26-year-old kept that $90,000 engagement ring because it was worth $90,000. Shame on us.

Talking points

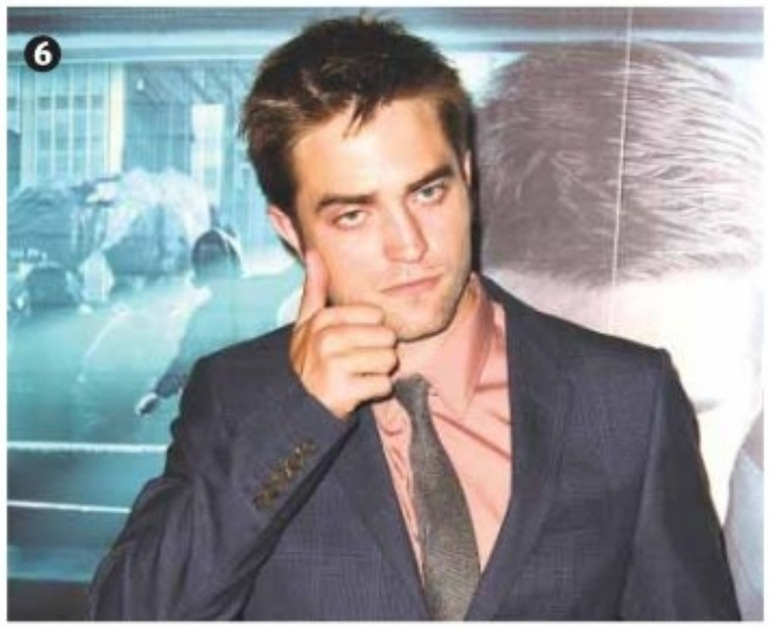
Tensions seem to have eased between divorcing couple Demi Moore and Ashton Kutcher, who were spotted together at the birthday party for a Kabbalah instructor, according to People magazine. "They were friendly," a source says of the former couple, who arrived separately. "Ashton got up at one point and grabbed coffee in a paper cup for Demi, and they smiled a few times during the program at each other. They seemed to get along and feel comfortable." And apparently that's as good as it's going to get, says another source: "The family is in a pretty good place right now, but Ashton and Demi won't go back to being what they were. Ashton will always be a part of their lives, especially with regard to the girls and how close he is with them."

Mary-Kate Olsen is over the boys

Mary-Kate Olsen is reportedly dating former French president Nicolas Sarkozy's younger brother, Olivier Sarkozy, according to Us Weekly. "It's true, they're dating, and she's definitely interested in him," a source says. "MK is constantly complaining about boys not being mature enough for her. She got the kids out of her system. Now being a businesswoman dominates her time, and she is rarely impressed with guys. They are good for each other." The pair were first spotted attending a New York Knicks game in late April, and they reportedly spent Memorial Weekend together in the Hamptons.

Rihanna and Drake back on?

Exes Rihanna and Drake, who dated briefly in 2009, may be giving things another go, if their behavior at a Miami hot spot on a recent night out is any indication. "Rihanna was all over Drake this weekend," a source tells Us Weekly. "They were holding hands and dancing all close on the dance floor." The pair have remained close friends and frequent collaborators. "We weren't really sure what it was," Rihanna previously said in an interview of her dating Drake. "It was a really fragile time in my life, so I just didn't want to get too serious with anything or anyone."



Working it for the weekend

1. "True Blood" stars Alexander Skarsgard, Anna Paquin and Stephen Moyer were on the red carpet for the HBO show's Season 5 premiere.

2. Also vamping it up at the "True Blood" premiere: The alarmingly pretty Ryan Kwanten. Howl howl!

3. Charlize Theron was at the "Prometheus" world premiere in London Wednesday night. Well, a lot of people were — but they didn't look like this.

4. OK, fine: Michael Fassbender gets a "Prometheus" honorable mention.

5. Best red carpet ever: Jon Stewart attended the Sesame Street Workshop Benefit Gala Wednesday night in New York.

6. Are you asking us to call you, Robert Pattinson? Done.

Obama attacks are short on facts

RE: "OPEN SEASON ON DONALD TRUMP?": It seems that Mr. Dupont suffers from the typical Republican malady of making accusations without backing them up with facts. "Bombers, communists, socialists and America-hating black racists" ... really? Facts, please. As for Rev. Wright, President Obama denounced his remarks and resigned his membership in his church. I have yet to hear Romney denounce Trump and give back the money that Trump donated to his campaign.
BARB MILUSKI, VIA E-MAIL

Trump is still babbling about Obama's birth certificate. What happened to the investigators he sent to Hawaii? The ones he said would find some "interesting" information about Obama?
ROBERT LA ROSA, VIA E-MAIL

Only upset when a Republican targeted

RE: "POLITICAL DISCOURSE HAS GOTTEN NASTY": I agree with Mr. Minkin that it was wrong to label Romney or anyone an idiot. But why does he object only when it happens to a Republican? Obama began his term with serious work to do. Instead of addressing the work, the GOP met secretly with the banks to block needed reform. Instead of reality, they have abused us with three years of distorting facts and taking them out of context, name-calling and personal attacks. Heading into the election, they're doing even more. Joseph DuPont's letter continues that.
HARRY THORN, PHILADELPHIA

The people need government support

RE: "INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS ARE ALL WE'VE GOT": In a perfect world, I would agree with you, Mr. Donnoe. But we always seem to have a very small minority of rich, old, white guys trying to limit the rights of others across this country. That is why we have women's rights, gay rights, Hispanic rights, voting rights groups, etc. Conservatives are limiting human rights in 21st century America. JD DUCAS, VIA E-MAIL

Kelly Donnoe writes that there are only individual, God-given rights. In fact, there are many kinds of rights: Some are inherent, some are contractual and yes, some are granted by government. Donnoe also implies that rights are to be protected by private action, not by government. Thomas Jefferson wrote that governments are instituted to secure our rights. Of course, Donnoe prefers Locke over Jefferson. But even Locke recognized a role for government in protecting our rights. The idea that rights belong only to individuals who can afford private security (mercenaries) is indeed a "perverse view."
DAN WYLIE-SEARS, VIA E-MAIL

In the American South, before the Civil Rights Act of 1964, you see, blacks had to put up with racial segregation, being mowed down with high-pressure water hoses, denial of housing, food, services, the use of public bathrooms and drinking fountains, or, as in at least one case, being lynched for talking to a white woman. Then, using the "perverse theory that rights are granted to us by the state," "government coercion enforced a perverted view of liberty" and then they got to use bathrooms and they weren't lynched anymore! SCOTT KEELEY, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. You'll receive greater gratification by trying to advance your personal interests rather than spending time half-heartedly promoting another.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Several people with whom you'll be involved will sense that you can be trusted with certain secrets that they're bursting to tell somebody.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Small talk might be more pleasing to you than weighty subjects. If you're looking to spend time with friends, find those who don't take life too seriously.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Choose your words carefully so that what you say cannot be distorted or taken out of context and then reflect poorly on you when repeated.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. If you plan ahead carefully, you should be able to make your present efforts fit comfortably into your future plans and objectives. Looking to the future has its merits.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Your abilities to research, probe and detect are very astute at this point in time. Use this day to get in touch with an associate about a matter on which you sense that he or she has been holding back.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. If someone offers you some suggestions that are far better than your thoughts about a matter of mutual interest, don't let your pride get in the way. It behooves you to employ the best plan available.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Strive to be methodical where your work is concerned. If you make a detailed list and follow it to the letter, you'll find that it will enhance your productivity and industriousness.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Your perceptions regarding involvements that hold elements of chance could be more accurate than usual. Don't bet your entire wallet, but it's OK to wager a dollar or two.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. When your family holds a council about a matter that affects everybody, don't restrain your opinions. You might be the one who has ideas that surpass theirs.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Don't be surprised if your mental processes are working overtime and your head is flooded with dynamite ideas. Be sure to jot them down — many will be better than usual.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. You're likely to have a good head for spotting bargains right now. You stand a good chance of finding something you've wanted for a long time at the right price. Don't hesitate to take advantage of the moment.

Now in its fifth year, Philly Beer Week is a 10-day boozy monster of a drinking fest We get you started with six events well worth the hangover

Philly Beer Week returns for its fifth 10-day extravaganza of all things sudsy on Friday. Your best bet is to parse the calendar by day at www.phillybeerweek.org or download the iPhone/Android app to create your own schedule. But to get you started, here are six must-hits. Stay hydrated, arrive early, bring cash and prepare for the deluge.

1. Worlds Collide

Aging craft beers in used liquor barrels is hot among America's most interesting brewers. Prohibition Taproom 'tenders created eight cocktails inspired by eight barrel-aged brews, each incorporating the base spirit that occupied the barrel first. Special desserts will also be available to pair with each cocktail/brew duo.

Monday, 6 p.m.-1 a.m.
Pay as you go
Prohibition Taproom

2. Not That Kind of Acid

In 2006, Colorado brewer Adam Avery said, "Sour is the new hoppy." Though sour and wild ales don't yet command an IPA-size spotlight, the style is influencing brewers and drinkers on every level. Learn the canon from Cantillon and Rodenbach to Russian River at this tasting class.

Monday, 6-8 p.m.
$40 (call 215-238-5888 for tickets)
Khyber Pass Pub

3. Festival Exclusive

Devised collaboratively by Philly Beer Week brass, Iron Hill brewer Chris LaPierre and Brasserie Dupont in Tourpes, Belgium, Dupont Speciale Belge boasts an infusion of lightly smoked malt, adding an aromatic edge to this refreshing amber brew. This year's featured beer will be tapped Sunday at this reunion of its makers, plus importers VanBerg & DeWulf — the folks that get the beer here.

Sunday, 8-10 p.m.
Pay as you go
The Grey Lodge Pub

4. Schmooze 'n' Booze

Sam Calagione of Dogfish Head isn't just a pretty face — he's the guy who dragged craft brewing into the mainstream with extreme brews and smart marketing. Trade jokes with Sam and other cool kids at this cocktail party-style gathering, complete with butlered bites paired with rare brews.

Tuesday, 4:30-7:30 p.m.
$75 (call 215-569-9525 for tickets)
Nodding Head Brewpub

5. Bang Your Head

Iacopo Lenci of Bruton Italian Craft Beer is a self-described "weird" brewer. The son of a Tuscan winemaker, Iacopo launched his first iteration of Bruton as brewpub (with no seats) that hosted punk and hard-core shows. He'll be showcasing little-known metal bands for bargoers swilling discounted flights of unusual brews from the boot.

Tuesday, 9 p.m.-1 a.m.
Pay as you go
Alla Spina, 1410 Mt. Vernon St.

6. Chicken Run

Work your thighs, then eat some on this Beer Runner's stomp from Philadelphia Brewing Company to American Sardine Bar, where chef Scott Schroeder will lay out an all-you-can-chew fried chicken feast. Ticket price includes food, three PBC brews and a commemorative T-shirt.

June 10, 3- 8 p.m.

Hop Along celebrates their awaited debut album this weekend ◐ Singer Frances Quinlan on making sense, sounding alive and the difficulties of starting fresh

JAKEMAYDAYRVA

▶ Hop Along plays the First Unitarian Church on Friday night with Band Name, Mary Lattimore and Little Big League. For tickets, visit www.r5productions.com.

West Philadelphia musician Frances Quinlan, 26, began playing guitar and writing songs when she was 14 years old. While in college, in Maryland, she started a solo project called Hop Along, Queen Ansleis. After graduation, she returned to Philadelphia and, with her brother, the drummer Mark Quinlan, decided to drop "Queen Ansleis" from the title and eventually recruited Fishtown bassist Tyler Long.

The current incarnation of Hop Along spent the next two years working on a debut album, "Get Disowned," which was released last month on the local record label Hot Green. This Friday, they celebrate the album with a hometown concert at First Unitarian Church, their first performance of the new year.

"We wanted to capture a very raw sound," Frances says about the 10-song album. "I love making the acoustic guitar sound like it has filthy strings, and we just really wanted it to sound alive."

Songs like "Some Grace" and "No Good Al Joad," which showcase the band's gritty side and its penchant for melodic, power-pop songwriting, show Hop Along accomplishing this goal. But, Frances' uniquely unpredictable voice, which always sounds as if it's about to derail, is the star of the album. Her singing is especially potent on "Tibetan Pop Stars," where her voice explodes atop a heavily distorted, and irresistible, electric guitar riff.

"A record is like a moment in your life when everything makes sense," says Frances, "and then later you reflect and realize where you were. Most of these songs are about trying to find a place in the world — it's about wanting to separate yourself from who you were and to start fresh, but also realizing the impossibility of doing that."

RipRig jazz series debuts

▶ Alban Bailly

A new jazz, free-jazz and experimental music series called RipRig hosts its first concert this Sunday night in the backroom of the West Philadelphia coffee shop Cafe Clave. Founded by musicians Matt Stein, Alban Bailly and Stephen Buono, RipRig plans to showcase local artists, as well as the occasional touring band, on the first and third Sundays of each month. The series borrows its name from a recording by innovative jazz saxophonist Roland Kirk, who was known to play multiple instruments simultaneously. "We hope RipRig can capture the spirit of that album while maintaining a deep respect for the amazing musicians who came before us, and the beauty of the jazz tradition," says Stein. "Also, we want the series to have more of a punk attitude."

Sunday's inaugural concert is a triple-header with the New York multi-instrumentalist Mike Gamble headlining, and an opening performance by the local experimental-jazz trio Modern Music. Providing the second set of the evening is Yapp, a jazz quartet featuring RipRig co-founders Stein on bass and Bailly on guitar.

Rusty Edwards just happy to be in Birds uniform

Journeyman QB learning new system Fighting to get on practice field, earn reps Long shot to make it

During the first few days of OTAs, Trent Edwards looked like a journeyman quarterback. His throws were off-target and his footwork lethargic as he unofficially slipped to fourth on the Eagles' QB depth chart.

Edwards knows the deal. He knows he'll never be the No. 1 quarterback here in Philadelphia. He's just trying to compete.

"I completely understand [the situation]," Edwards said Thursday. "I understand that I still need to get those reps, from the side, from behind, and making sure I'm picking up as much as I can as fast as I can."

The Eagles brought the six-year veteran back in February, way before they drafted Nick Foles in the third round. Nothing is set in stone yet, of course. Far from it. But it seems highly unlikely that Edwards would beat out Foles or backup Mike Kafka this spring or in training camp.

Edwards knows he's in a tough spot, but the 28-year-old is extremely grateful to be around guys like Mike Vick and DeSean Jackson. He's also very familiar with Andy Reid's reputation for grooming signal-callers.

"I'm happy to be here with the Eagles," Edwards said. "For me to sit and watch and learn the system, and to be around those coaches and players — there are weapons everywhere and it's just a matter of me doing my job, improving, and hopefully getting to where I need to be."

And Edwards will be the first to acknowledge that where he needs to be and where he is right now aren't even on the same train track.

"I don't have a timetable," he said. "I'm just trying to tweak some things and have made some progress, but I have a long way to go."

▶ The odds are against Trent Edwards making the Birds' final roster. He was cut by the Raiders last season after camp.

Eagles notebook

Maclin ready for breakout 2012 season

Jeremy Maclin is antsy. He wants the 2012 season to start after missing time and battling through a mysterious illness last year.

This season, Maclin reported to OTAs in a bulked-up frame. He's expecting big things.

"I wish the season started tomorrow," Maclin said.

Mike Vick is predicting this will be Maclin's best year to date.

"He has worked tremendously hard over the offseason," Vick said. "He has caught a ton of balls the last four, five days." METRO

Behind the wheel with Vance Worley

Worley's World

AS TOLD TO ED CONDRAN

A WEEKLY DIARY

If you're selling an exotic sports car and you post those wheels on Craigslist, you might meet Vance Worley. When 'Vanimal' wasn't focusing on baseball in his rookie season, he was sitting at his locker scanning the online ads for his ultimate car.

"That would be the '69 Camaro," Worley said. "That's my dream car. The funny thing is that I did almost buy one off of Craigslist when I was in Lehigh Valley. When they brought it up, I heard it coming, I said, 'Damn, this sounds good.' But when I got up close, I thought, 'This screams body work.' It's a shame since it had a lot more rust on it than they said."

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Worley has been on the DL, but will throw Friday.

But that won't deter Worley to cruise Craigslist. He has made like a GM and traded parts.

"That's what I did when I had a 1990 IROC," Worley said. "I made my deals, but ultimately I sold all of my stuff because I just don't have the time anymore. There's other stuff I have to pay attention to."

Like the '06 Corvette.

"I've upgraded from a Camaro," Worley said. "It's a nice ride."

Worley also rocks another high performance vehicle.

"I just did some work on my Chrysler 300 CSRT, 2007, it's like a Bentley but it's not," Worley said.

But it could pass for a Bentley. Would Worley ever park his Bentley-esque car in a TGI Friday's handicapped zone like Allen Iverson supposedly did when the former Sixer hung out in Bala Cynwyd?

"Did he really do that?," Worley said. "I would never do that. I have no problem parking where I should. But I do love cars. Some guys do and I'm one of those guys. I love the look and sound of certain cars and, of course, I love driving them."

LPGA stars set to light up the Shore

Professional golf returns to the Jersey Shore this weekend.

A star-studded list, including Michelle Wie, Yani Tseng, Natalie Gulbis and Morgan Pressel, will descend on the Bay Course at the Stockton Seaview Hotel and Golf Club (Galloway, N.J.) on Friday for the ShopRite LPGA Classic. Brittany Lincicome looks to defend her title, after she edged Cristie Kerr by one stroke last year.

The Bay Course is a links-style layout with small greens. The course measures in at 6,155 yards at a par-71. The women will compete for 54 holes with a purse of $1.5 million on the line. Final round (2-6 p.m.) is slated for Sunday and it will be televised on The Golf Channel. METRO
